Improving Water Security – Lessons from IWRM Cases in Indonesia, Nepal and Uzbekistan

17 May, 14:00 – 16:00

Rapporteur: Iris Caluag, Philippines, SEAYEN

Summary

- Working on water security should be a means to unite people, and make them work together to reach a common goal.
- Timely and proper implementation of projects is of utmost importance. There are challenges to water resources management, but each country and river basin has its unique strength and solutions.
- Knowledge-sharing is important. The river basin management should develop a system on information so that all stakeholders can access information and data.
- Political will, knowledge sharing, stakeholder ownership, good data, and appropriate technology are some of the important keys to support successful IWRM and to achieve water security

Thank you for listening.
